Old water bills have never been so useful

The UK's water industry is changing. By mid 2017 organisations will be able to choose their supplier, which much like energy, is an opportunity to reduce costs.

Until then, it's best to start with a Historical Bill Check to a) identify savings potential immediately and b) in many cases, provide revenue from retrospective rebates (as far back as six years).

It's logical because as soon as an organisation changes supplier the existing rebate opportunities become vastly more complicated to recover.

Historical Bill Check

One in three sites can reveal a savings opportunity through analysis alone with savings ranging from 10 - 45% of annual spend. The check will highlight billing anomalies, fixed charges & allowances, validation of Surface Water Drainage charges, consumption, leak identification, suitability of meter size plus Trade Effluent analysis and potential for water efficiencies and Rainwater Harvesting.

This will be presented to you in a report, so you can easily understand all opportunities, both financially & environmentally, and then how to proceed.

We only need a few pieces of information about your organisation to commence your review and your sustainable water future.
